

Applications are invited for a full-time, tenure-track position in Water Science at the rank of Assistant Professor with the Department of Geography and Planning in the College of Arts and Science, University of Saskatchewan, to begin July 1, 2025.

Applicants must have a Ph.D. at the time of appointment. The successful candidate is expected to establish an independent research program, contribute to excellence in undergraduate and graduate teaching, supervise undergraduate and graduate students, serve on student committees, and undertake relevant administrative activities, including meetings and committee work of the department, college and university. The ideal candidate will have expertise in process hydrology with experience in one or more of geomatics/remote sensing, modeling, field observations, and Indigenous community engagement. An interest in cold regions hydrology is an asset.

The Department (<https://artsandscience.usask.ca/geography/>) actively engages in research and teaching activities that span the natural, social, and health sciences. All of the Department's research and teaching activities align with the University's signature areas (<https://research.usask.ca/about/signature-areas-of-research.php>). Water is one of the University's signature research areas and the university is top ranked in Canada and in the top 20 in the world in water resources research. The Department is the home of the Centre for Hydrology (<https://research-groups.usask.ca/hydrology/index.php>), one of the most prestigious and productive hydrology research groups in the world, which provides leadership for and engages with the Global Institute for Water Security (<https://water.usask.ca/>) and the Global Water Futures programme. The Department has strong collaborations with water research programs on campus, provincially, nationally, and globally, such as the Saskatchewan Water Security Agency, Environmental and Climate Change Canada's National Hydrology Research Centre (NHRC; <https://profiles-profiles.science.gc.ca/en/research-centre/national-hydrology-research-centre-nhrc>), UNESCO, WMO, etc.

The College of Arts and Science offers a dynamic combination of programs in the humanities, fine arts, social sciences, and natural sciences. There are over 10,000 students and 300 faculty in the College of Arts and Science, including Dr. John Pomeroy, Distinguished Professor and Canada Research Chair in Water Resources and Climate Change (<https://artsandscience.usask.ca/profile/JPomeroy>). The College emphasizes student and faculty research, interdisciplinary programs, community-engaged research and knowledge mobilization, and international opportunities. For more information on the College of Arts and Science, see <https://artsandscience.usask.ca/>.

The University of Saskatchewan's main campus is situated on Treaty 6 Territory and the Homeland of the Métis. The University of Saskatchewan is located in the city of Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, a city with a diverse and thriving economic base, a vibrant arts community, and a full range of leisure opportunities. The University has a reputation for excellence in teaching, research, and scholarly activities; it offers a full range of undergraduate, graduate, and professional programs to a student population of over 26,000. We encourage applications from members of equity groups (e.g., women, members of a racialized minority, Indigenous persons, and persons with disabilities). The Department of Geography and Planning supports excellence and recognizes that principles of equity, diversity, and inclusion (EDI) are fundamental to this goal. Recruitment will be guided by the strong commitment of the University of Saskatchewan, the College of Arts and Science, and the Department of Geography and Planning to EDI. Indigenous candidates or candidates who engage in Indigenous research may request to have an advocate during the interview process.
