

CALL FOR PAPERS

This year marks the 60th anniversary of the Regroupement des géographes du Québec (RGQ). In celebration, the RGQ will hold its conference from November 16 to 18, 2022 at the Cœur des sciences, Université du Québec à Montréal (UQAM). The main theme is "60 years of the RGQ: Springboard to the future!".

With the mission to promote geography and represent the geographers of Quebec, we envision a conference that will foster exchanges and networking between geographers. As well, we invite you to reflect on the path taken and the one to come. Four areas of reflection are featured at the conference:

- Theme 1: Quebec geography, a historical trajectory
- Theme 2: Geographers facing the challenges of the 21st century
- Theme 3: Geography, a changing discipline
- Theme 4: Promoting geography

The conference invites individual communications and thematic sessions from speakers working in the academic, educational and professional circles. Although the main conference language is French, proposals are welcome in both French and English. Field trips will also be offered on the last day, in keeping with the great tradition of geographical conference.

Submission options:

Communication (20 minutes): The individual communications (20 minutes) will be followed by a short discussion period. The members of the scientific committee will group communications into sessions according to the themes of the conference.

Thematic session (90 minutes): The thematic sessions will last 90 minutes and will bring together three or four proposals organized around the same theme. In order to encourage dialogue between academic and professional geographers, presenters from at least two of these spheres will be grouped together.

You are invited to submit a proposal for a communication and/or thematic session to publicize your research, achievements, challenges and ideas. Submissions are open now until April 30, 2022. Announcement of the selected proposals will be made no later than May 31, 2022.
